

Spurning:

I have been asked to find a place where people could possibly study all sort of things to do with the theatre, e.g. stage managing, set making, controlling sound and light, etc.
If available:

- Duration of basic studies;
- Possibilities of further studies;
- Demands (if any) made on set and "props" makers;
- Language of tuition.

Dramatiska institutet - A University College of Film, Radio, Television and Theatre in Sweden offers a two-year Theatre Technicians' Programme. Unfortunately it seems to be only in Swedish. You can find more info here: <http://www.draminst.se/start/inenglish/>
At Malmö Högskola, they have a small course in Light Installation in English, 15 ECTS:
<http://www.edu.mah.se/KK3232/>

And then there is the three year University programme for actors that is given in Swedish: <http://utbkat.gu.se/utbildning/utb/PKSKSK.html>

The education or training of Theatre technicians like stage managing, set making, controlling of sound and light, etc is rather similar to the situation in your country. Basically these people have relevant qualifications acquired in VET system. In order to become as a Theatre technicians they are learning by doing - on job training.

It is possible to be trained as a stage technician (sound and light) within the Budapest University of Theatre and Film. It is a two-year long training, and one has the opportunity to be trained further for one more year in order to get a higher qualification. The language of tuition is Hungarian.

I made a search for "teatertekniker" on the Danish guidance portal (www.ug.dk). It appears to be a 4 year college degree at Statens Teaterskole. You can read about it here: http://www.ug.dk/Uddannelse.aspx?article_id=udb-teatertekniker

At this webpage you'll also see links (to the right) to related study programmes, such as scenograf, tonemester and teater- og udstillingstekniker.

www.ug.dk is the place to look if you need information of this sort. But you're very welcome to contact me if you can't find what you are looking for!

in Germany the job you described can be learned as vocational education within the "dual system" - so this means that people have to apply at theatres where they have the practical part of the education. During the whole education of 3 1/2 years they also have to visit a vocational school for the theoretical part. The name of this educational pathway is "Fachkraft für Veranstaltungstechnik", and you'll find more information at www.berufenet.de . Language of tuition is German.
